

Catherine Fieschi is the inaugural director the newly created Global Policy Institute at Queen Mary University of London. She is also Director of the London-based research group Counterpoint. Prior to founding Counterpoint, Catherine led the London based think tank Demos (2005-2008). An academic by training, she holds a PhD in Comparative Political Science from McGill University.

Widely published in academia and beyond, her research focuses on populist movements and forms of contemporary mobilisation in Europe and across developed economies. Catherine is the author of Populocracy: The Tyranny of Authenticity and the Rise of European Populism (Agenda, 2019) and of In the Shadow of Democracy (MUP, 2004); as well as numerous pamphlets and articles on extremism, populism, and identity politics.

A longstanding adviser to European political leaders and campaigns, Catherine also advises business and political decision-makers around the world on new forms of political risk and the changing dynamics of popular mobilisation. Catherine has a column in the Chatham House magazine, The World Today, is a former editorial board member of Prospect magazine, and is a regular participant in press, radio and television debates. She grew up in Italy, Senegal, the United States, France and Canada and is fluent in a number of languages. She lives in London.
